Class Day

Class Poem

Tomorrow Came Too Soon
Dedicated to the Class of 2007

And I guess that someday perhaps it won't matter
Like old photographs faded and discolored
Like tattered newspaper articles
Like outdated mementos
Like yesterday long gone

Still...

I wish that I could capture your laughter in a net and hang it on my wall
I wish that I could snatch the twinkle in your eye and use it to light up my room
I wish that I could mold your handprint with every fine delicate line

Cause tomorrow came too soon
Cause tomorrow came too soon

I wish that I could abduct the thoughts you're thinking and save them in a trunk
I wish that I could catch your tears, watch them drip into a bottle
I wish that I could seize your voice and compose a rhapsody in minor E

Cause tomorrow's come too soon
Cause tomorrow's come too soon

I wish that I could keep you
Like gold locket worn around the neck

I wish I could hold you
Like the earth holds the sea

And this poem of simlie is my quiet adieu
Cause tomorrow came before I could have my fill of you.

-Cornelia Chislom

Last Will and Testament

Having been appointed reader of the will for Central High School Class of 2007, I, Kayley Young, do hereby publish and declare the following to be the last will and testament for the senior class.

I, Carmen Tanner, being of apple bottom and voluptuous thighs, hereby will a portion of my butt to any girl in need.

I, Gabrielle Bloodsaw, being of empty pockets and a minimum wage job, hereby will all of my school fines back to the school.

I, Eboni Shelton, being of money with no job, will my allowance to Gabrielle Bloodsaw in the hopes that she can overcome her minimum wage pay-check and empty pockets.

I, Chris Poole, being of erratic mind and ethereal body, will to Aaron Crawford the scientific unit of "magic" and its uncanny ability to right any wrong answer and explain any situation.

I, Brooke Cooper, will to you, Caitlin Humes, the fire inside that doesn't let us quit. I will you many crazy socks, sunny days, and grass fights to come. I will you my love for art, friends, and love itself. And lastly, I will you the ability to make everything that you dream become your reality. I love you Caiti! You're my best friend in the world!

I, Brittani Crawford, hereby will Daniel Bishop the tolerance to make it through one more year, everlasting charm to win over all the ladies, another repeat of "Right Here Waiting," and a rainy day to keep the old times in his memory!

I, Melissa Shavers, hereby will to Mia Godwin my crown as party animal. Wear it proudly and "Get Crumped Up!"

I, Kasey Hicks, will Jericka Duke a pop lock and drop it, and as much fun as possible. Keep your head up baby girl!

I, Jackie Jones, will Paige Howard spoonholders, roffles, and the ability to jump through car windows to claim shotgun.

I, Ms. Anderson, give Jackie Jones the skinny mouse and Melissa Shavers the fat mouse.

I, Zach Butler, being of questionable mind, leave all my military bearing, and the half eaten bologna sandwich that's in the fridge and smells like old hot dogs to Keith Pruett.

I, Rachael Baggett, of intelligent, but slightly lazy mind and skinny body, hereby will Kelcie Edwards the unlimited use of the word mandatory, and the strength of mind to not strangle those who don't know the meaning of it.

I, Nicholas Tomaszewski, will my #12 soccer jersey and all its powers that it holds to Casey Lawrence. Stay strong and never back down on a 50/50 ball.

I, Taylor English, being of life-long determination to change the world and extremely opinionated mind will to Dadrion Barnes a bottle of aspirin for all the headache to endure and the hope that tomorrow will be better.

I, Kayley Young, being of extremely organized mind and tired, but perpetually busy body, will to the Yearbook Kids the ability to stay organized, make it through another year of craziness and deadlines, and my best pair of stunna shades so that they will always stay "Doe Boy Fresh!"

I, Torie McCoy, being of poor taste in fashion hereby will my wardrobe to all up and coming seniors searching for a good tacky day outfit.

I, Andrew B. Peary, being of questionable insanity and weak body, do hereby will to all my friends I am leaving behind my wisdom, knowledge, restraint, sanity, optimism, sarcasm, useless facts, devotion, faith, and lastly, my work ethic. May God bless you, you and keep you as you hopefully put these skills to use. I will never forget any of you. Especially you, you know what you did.

I, Tyler Strickland, will to the Purple Pounder baseball team the power to stay strong and stick together because winning isn't everything, but your team is.

I, Alyssa McClure, being of normal body and improving driving skills, will to Lauren and Shelby Strickland, the ability to make it through, keep dancing, and always smile! I love you besties!

I, Heather Blaylock, being of average body and blonde mind, will to Courtney and Amie the motivation to keep doin' well and the strength not to hurt people who run their immature mouths! I'll miss you!

I, Kitty Kat, will to Gazelle and Tramp the ability to make it through, deal with all the drama, and always "make the boys jump on it!"

I, J.D. Wildes, will to Megan Huffer and all her AP friends good luck next year, and to the teachers, good luck as well in keeping up with them.

I, Clay Moreland, being of worldly mind and traveled body, will to Ricky and my little brother Ryan the faith to find sanity in this insane world, or atleast a yo-yo to distract them.

I, Jordan Nahay, hereby will my attendance to all those who couldn't find time to make it to school.

I, Amber Everett, would like to will you, Brittani Stoker, the best of luck through your senior year. I love you sister.

I, Natalie Brown, hereby will Mike Hardin the patience for another year and a good grade in the subject of "well".

I, Amber Carver, hereby will Alliea Carver the tolerance to stay strong through three more years of high school, my positive attitude so you can handle every obstacle that gets in your way, and a promise to always be there for you when you need your sister and your friend, Good Luck! I, Jennifer Raulston, being of sound of mind and un-tan body, will Stephanie Raulston my amazing soccer skills and my super awesome spazzy fake.

I, Rachel Lane, being of sound of mind and tanning bed assisted body, will Ashley Lee what is left of my common sence and an endless supply of cupcakes.

I, Morgan Sissom, will to Stephanie Raulston a Free IPOD and Free SMILES so she can send FREE SMILES to her XBOX buddies.

We, the senior girls of 2007, of extremely intelligent minds and very hot bodies, hereby will to the sophomore girls the number to our local health clinic, an easy step-by-step guide on how a ponytail is supposed to be worn, lots of duct tape to keep your mouths shut, and plenty of make up remover, cause your going to need it!

Class Prophecy

As I sat down at my kitchen table to write this speech last night, my mom brought in the mail and set in on the table. Furthering my procrastination, I started to look through the mail in hopes that there was something that I could further postpone my actually having to do some work. I found in the stack of mostly junk mail a letter addressed to me. I opened it up and began to read it. It read:

Dear Bentley,

This is the future. Or this is written in the future by you. Or I guess by me. Just... Whatever. Please read this and take careful note of what lies ahead of you. First let me explain how I got this letter to you. Under the study of Doctor Alex Pinion, Tony Klemm and Micheal Hammer were able to open a wormhole in the space/time continuum and can now send crap into the future.

The year is 2057 and I am 67. Let me start by saying be careful. Six kids with six different women are costing a lot in child support. I have just returned from what was supposed to be our 50th class reunion. However, upon my arrival to the reunion, I learned that Taylor English had burnt the school down because nobody was doing exactly what she wanted. I found Kayley Young bawling outside because Taylor had run from the police, and Kayley was left with no one but her twelve cats. Amanda Garrison, now an architect, was comforting her while telling of how she had just erected a new building in honor of herself, with her face on the side of it. Unfortunately it overshadowed the building built in honor of Emily McLendon (Another building that Amanda takes credit for building). Morgan Sissom and Ian Sterns were talking about how they would contribute money to rebuild the school. Morgan was the first legal hemp farmer in the state of Tennessee. Coincidentally, beside Morgan's crop field, Ian had started a Brownie mixture factory and so they had both become very wealthy. Brittani Morgan was absent. At least that is what Logan Coe told me. He also told me that Brandon Catchings had finally been diagnosed with narcolepsy and Justin Moler was on the National Competitive Eating Competition Tour. Jimmy Moore and Cody Hamilton had been on the run from cops ever since they got caught frog jigglin' in the Chattanooga State pond. Wani Kiri was a soccer ref at Central and was notorious for giving all the white players red cards for being white. Taylor Brown loved this because he coached the girls' soccer team, and the girls' basketball team. Evelyn Bissell was the Central band director and a member of Yanni's tour group. Tom Dillard, her husband, just followed her around and did as she said.

I began to ask Logan more and more questions about people and was so surprised by all the stuff he knew. Apparently he had actually become a spy for the FBI and had been keeping files on all of the graduates from the 07 class at Central. Jordan Nayhay was a salon stylist specializing in the white man's fro. The government had arrested Rosa Timoshuck because she had been found to be a crazy Ukrainian spy. RayRay Hughes started a mirror business because no one liked looking at himself more than he did. Marquise Barfield opened a school of Do C Do Dance. Alora Barclay was his biggest customer; she always seemed to be following him around. Phillip Gossett had not been seen since he moved to Columbia.

I do not watch TV anymore so I was surprised to find out that Blake Allen had won America's Next Top Model many years ago. Jackie Jones is bald. Imagine that. Amanda Green was admitted to an insane asylum after many doctors became VERY worried by her unrelenting optimism about everything. Matt Swafford and Rachael Baggett had starred in their own TV show called Matt and Rachael. Apparently Matt is a little bit country and Rachael is a little bit country too. So the show didn't do so hot.

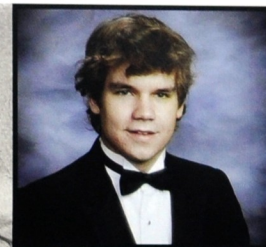

More and more people kept showing up and I was blown away by what I found out. Ashley Atherton had become a writer for some big soap opera because she knew so much about drama. Jonathan Lafoe gave up being a punter for football because he couldn't make a team; however, he was recruited by the Mexican soccer league. Megan Duncan was tragically paralyzed because she got bitten by one of her pet scorpions. Terrell Walker (mumbles). Eboni Shelton finally quit talking because she lost her voice. She is now a deaf education teacher. Terrance Sims gave up singing that silly chorus music and joined Bone Thugs n' Harmony. After many hard years of work Brandon Ratliffe now owns the Highway 58 Taco Bell.

I was amazed at the people who made it into show business too. Chris Poole was cast as Kramer in the Seinfeld remake. Jonathan Kilgore landed a lead role in the Disney on Ice show as Dumbo. His wife, Taja Dye, was very disappointed because that was like so totally like uncool, ya know? Aaron Fredrick and Brooke St. Claire finally got hitched at a shotgun wedding in Alabama. Aaron is actually the president of the Kenny Chesney fan club because of all the fans, amazingly enough, he had the highest ACT score. Brad Brazeale is now the leader of the River Dance. I noticed that Ryan Iarussi was nowhere to be found, and someone told me that because he had not been any his senior year at Central, he got mixed up and went to Chattanooga State's 2007 class reunion. Jennifer Raulston was awarded the most assertive citizen award by the newly elected mayor of Harrison, Samuel Capehart. Jennifer had had six kids. Each one of them had pale skin and blonde hair. Shaunna Huff owned a barrel factory - she made all kinds of barrels. The next things I found out blew my mind. Deonte Gibson spoke. And apparently DJ McCallister had a job. Wow. Nick Tomachefski had recently made local news because he was one strike away from bowling a 300 in a national tournament when he and his five time remarried wife, Lindsey Woodburn, got into a fight, again. Unfortunately, he lost the tournament to his arch nemesis Bradley West. Ironically enough, Jesse Jarrett had given up on art because it didn't have enough to do with himself and decided to pursue his literary career. He managed to get a job working for Hugh Hefner. Andy Kijilgard managed to make it into the Guinness Book of World Records. He has set the record for the longest time someone has ever smiled. Anthony Williams also received national attention. He was captured by the government because they think he is the last of the ancient giant sloths.

We heard a car come screeching into the parking lot. Out of it popped Ashley Caho. She seemed to be way too excited about being at school, and then she passed out. When we finally revived her she said that she was alright. She told us that the doctor told her that she had a tendency to forget to breathe. Obviously, life was rougher for some of us.

So we all hung around for a little while and then decided to go get drinks. We got to our favorite restaurant, Hooters, and sat down when someone noticed that Rachel Lane was our server. I had had too much at this point. I put on my scarf and left. I proceeded to ride my bicycle home. Please watch out for the future. It's a mad house.

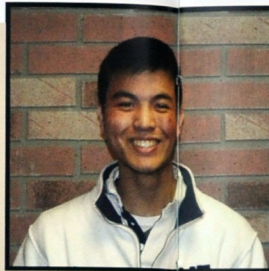

Sincerely,
Bentley Cook
