Introduction

Time never turns backward. Its face is always to the future; almost treading on the footsteps of to-morrow. We who have grown old in years, if not in heart, love, however, to turn back the pages of Life and read the progress we have made, regardless of how little it may be.

Will you turn back with me to that day when Missionary Ridge sounded with the boom of cannon and listen to the cries of angry men, the shrieking of shells, the sighs of the dying and picture to yourself this scene of human passion in its deadliest form, and then try to conceive, as I have tried, to find some reason, some logical conclusion, that would compensate humanity for these terrible scenes.

Patriotism is the flower of life, and it is sad to think that its greatest form should be found in the shedding of blood. It is, however, not my intention to mortalize, but to ask you to contemplate for a moment this picture, and compare it with that which half a century of human effort hath wrought for us.

The sounds of bugles and the roar of cannon have ceased. A field once red with human blood has been clothed by Mother Nature with the soft and gentle garment of peaceful green. Trees gnarled and broken by shot and shell have healed their wounds and once more have extended their grateful shade over a land once laid waste. Peace reigns supreme. But quiet solitude remains.

Another picture, teams of horses, shouts of men, the rattle of stones, the noise of hammers, is heard at the base of this historic ridge. What strange commotion is this? What is again breaking the silence of the day? Is strife once more to mar the face of peaceful nature? Not so, it is but the honest noise of honest labor. These men are about to raise a monument not to commemorate strife, but to teach peace and good will, happiness and beauty, to countless generations of boys and girls, Central High School is born.

In this little volume we have seen fit to picture our four years' existence, rather than to boast or tell of it. Read these pages, look at these pictures, and see for yourself whether we are shaping the destiny for which we are created.

Help us to enjoy our fruits, criticize our short-comings with a kindly heart, and judge us by what we have done, rather than by what we have failed to do.

In the name of the Central High School, its Faculty, its Students, I offer you our first Annual, "The Sleepless Eye." Its name is a suggestion of our work. We are wide awake to its possibilities, we never sleep at our post, eternal vigilance is the price of success, and we gladly pay the price.

Go ye then, "Sleepless Eye," forth into the great, great world, and may you bring pleasure to others as your preparation has brought pleasure to us.

Commercial Department

The Commercial Department

The supremacy of England has been obtained largely through its commercial interests. Germany is seeking its growth through the commercial agencies and people. America has inherited the right to commercial supremacy in the western hemisphere through its loyal devotion to the Monroe Doctrine and its protection of Republican ideas and principles. Although she has inherited this right, up to the present time she has failed to realize upon her inheritance.

The South, for generations agricultural, has awakened to the commercial possibilities and is fast forging to the front. The opening of the Panama Canal will give the South her greatest opportunity in this line. Her cities will grow, her factories will hum, both night and day, her ports will be crowded with giant birds of passage to carry her fruits of industry by way of the Panama Canal to the great southern continent.

This is not an idle dream, and to accomplish it thousands of her sons and daughters, her men and women will be engaged and will be needed to carry on her commercial future. Will the South be ready to fill these positions of trust and value? Will her sons and daughters give up what is theirs by right to outsiders, not because of lack of ability but because of lack of preparation?

We at Central High believe the South will be ready and Central High will have its quota of trained business men and women ready to take the field like their forefathers in defense of their inheritance. The Commercial Department is not a stranger at Central. It came at the very beginning, clad in swaddling clothes like all the other departments, but it has grown in numbers and power until to-day 251 students are enrolled under the Commercial banner.

Commerce is an exacting mother but one under whose wings there is room for all. The old idea of Commercial departments, merely a little bookkeeping, stenography, and penmanship has passed forever and in its stead there is a three years' course, one-half purely practical and the other half highly instructive. The students of this department take almost as much in the regular course as the average student and in addition the purely Commercial subjects. They are found in the Spanish department, the Science department, the Mathematics department, History department and even Pedagogy. You can find them at the stew pans and broiler in the Domestic Science; again at the machines in the Manual Training department, or working difficult problems in higher Mathematics. These are not mere bookkeepers or not mere typists, but students fitting themselves for future great positions.

TYPEWRITING ROOM

The present inspector of High Schools for the State of Tennessee, Professor Harned, has said that this department of Central is the finest one in the State of Tennessee as to equipment. It has a spacious hall, twice the size of an ordinary class-room, with model tables and chairs, bank, fully equipped to do a regular banking business, and typewriting room equipped with the latest Remington typewriters and single machines of the other makes.

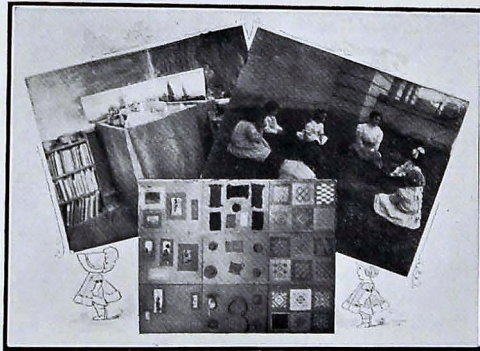

The county has spent less in the equipment of this side of commercialism than it has for the other departments, yet the equipment is used by nearly five times as many pupils.

As it should be, the Commercial department has placed on its shoulders the business side of all school activities. Whenever a dollar is needed and whenever a business proposition presents itself, the Commercial department is obliged to do the work. The students of this department have gotten experience that could not be gotten in any ordinary mercantile establishment in a year because of this burden on their shoulders. They have been tried in the art of selling, in the power of soliciting, in the value of advertising, in the need of presentation and never has there been the slightest failure. When these boys and girls go into business houses, that which they have learned will be valuable from the dollar sign standpoint and their value will be appreciated by those who employ them.

In the midst of their business life they have not failed on the culture side. In several classes they are leaders of their sections and not one of them have failed to make their grade in all other courses.

Central's Commercial department makes its bow. Gratitude beams from it on all who have aided the department. They promise merely to live up to their promise in the future, merely glancing back at the past with pardonable pride.

The Central Digest

For several years the increased number of Central students and the growing prosperity and importance of the school have made it desirable to establish a school paper, but it was not until this year that the project was started. Very soon after the beginning of the school year, the commercial department expressed its willingness to take charge of the business end and the rest was easy. A board was selected from among the students and a committee of three members of the faculty was appointed to aid them when they needed it. Since the first issue, which came out on October 28th, the paper has steadily been improved in all lines, until at present, Central can boast of one of the best school papers in the South.

The aim of the paper has been to increase literary effort among the students and to further the name and fame of our city and school. The board has endeavored to make the Digest weighty and spicy at the same time, and it has been their aim to make it reflect, in so far as possible, the spirit of the school. Whether this has been accomplished we leave our readers to judge. We are not satisfied with our progress and this, we think, is a good indication that better things may be expected in the future. May the Digest continue to flourish and improve as Central grows in favor and efficiency.

Central Glee Clubs

To keep pace with the increased activities of Central students in other lines, the musical talent of the school, under the direction of Prof. Garrett and Prof. Gunn, has been organized into a boys' and girls' glee club. While progress in this branch is of necessity slow and tedious, nevertheless by beginning with the fundamentals and working up thoroughly, both boys and girls have developed clubs of which Central may well be proud.

To start with, the material for both clubs was very high grade and to this most of the success which has thus far been attained has been due. However, without the excellent and efficient coaching of Prof. Garrett and Prof. Gunn this success would have been impossible. Both the clubs have performed at various school functions and always to the great delight of their hearers.

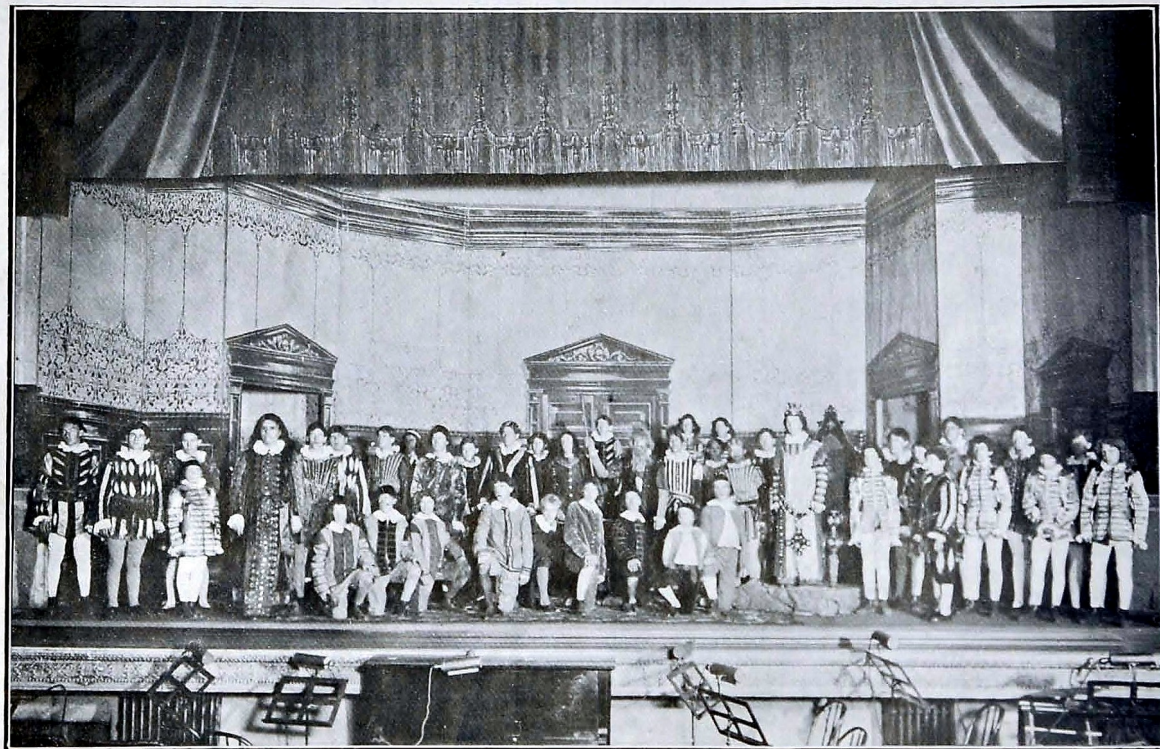

This branch of activity will undoubtedly be carried on to greater completeness in the coming years and Central will be represented in the musical line as well as she now is in the athletic field.

SOCIEDAD DE ESTUDIANTES DEL CASTELLANO

"EL CUMPLIMIENTO DEL DEBER"

Ours was the first or among the very first of the public schools of Tennessee to teach the Spanish, so melodious and beautiful, so simple and easy, and so important in the commercial life and public service of our people.

The five Spanish classes meet in the beautiful Cuarto Espanol in the northeast corner of the third floor, looking on Missionary Ridge battlefield. Here on January 3, 1908, the dedication day of the building, the party of distinguished visitors, including Governor Patterson and State Superintendent Jones, before the regular dedication exercises attended special ceremonies including the unveiling of pictures of scenes in the Alhambra palace and elsewhere in Granada and signed portraits and holograf letters of Admiral Cervera and Captain Hobson, the young American who so bravely led his men into the jaws of death, and the chivalrous Spaniard who saved the lives of the Americans and showed such courtesy afterwards, and who later took his little fleet out in the face of our much greater force and fought so bravely his hopeless fight.

In the Cuarto Espanol was organized on January 10, 1908, the Sociedad de Estudiantes del Castellano with a membership of thirty. For admission to active membership the pupil must be a student of Spanish in Central High School. The total enrollment up to time of this volume going to press is two hundred and seventy-one. The Sociedad adopted as motto the noble words of Admiral Cervera when after impressing on his government the unwisdom of sending his little squadron across the ocean he said, speaking for himself and his force, "We have only one motto: 'The fulfilment of duty,' " and went bravely out to his doom.

*La sociedad en que cada cual cumple
pliere con su deber poria feliz*
Admiral Cervera
Plaza de Armas
1908

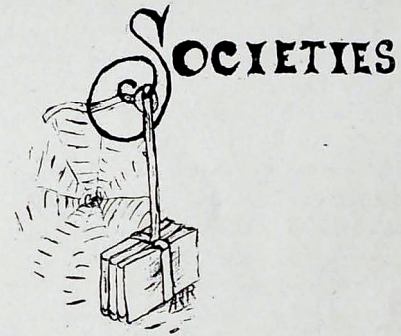

The admiral was elected the first Estudiante Honorario and the most interesting feature of the life of the Sociedad has been its connection with that gallant and godly Spanish gentleman who has shown so much kindness to the Spanish department and to the School. His portrait bears a beautiful sentiment and below it is a letter of wise and pious counsel that every student should take to heart. Opposite the door is a beautiful collection of views of Granada, Sevilla, the Escorial and other interesting scenes in Spain, which were his gift. Two years ago as Washington's birthday approacht he was askt for a letter to be read at the celebration, he tho then in what proved to be his last illness wrote with his own hand a letter containing a high tribute to Washington and good wishes and good counsel to the people of our Country. He died Saturday, April 3, 1909, and on the Monday following the flag of the School was by the principal's orders half-masted during the day, and the whole school adopted a resolution of sympathy. The Sociedad took appropriate action, the admiral's portrait was draped in Spanish colors and in mourning, and later his eldest son was elected Estudiante Honorario in his place.

Captain Hobson is also an Estudiante Honorario, as was the late Judge Seth M. Walker, in whose memory a tablet is about being placed in Central, and the list embraces other promient citizens, here and elsewhere.

The Sociedad has twice had charge of the celebration of Washington's birthday, and on one of these occasions distributed to each of the other departments of the School pictures of Washington or Martha Washington or Washington crossing the Delaware, with national flags. It has also brought visits to Central from Senator James Gordon, General Daniel E. Sickles, Lieutenant Wm. E. W. MacKinlay, U. S. A. and Mr. Chas. D. Mitchell, all of whom have address the School.

Few school rooms if any have so beautiful and interesting pictorial adornments as the Cuarto Espanol. Besides the portraits and letters of Admiral Cervera and Captain Hobson and the views of Granada which were unveiled on the day of the School dedication, and the Spanish views presented by Admiral Cervera, it has been enrich by a set of views of famous paintings, a picture of Admiral Cervera's tomb in the panteon de Marinos Ilustres at San Fernando which is to the Spanish navy what Westminster Abbey is to the British people, and a collection of Spanish views, all sent by Don Juan, his eldest son for himself or the family; a set of Cuban views, part of which as also a picture of our National Capitol were presented by Prof. G. A. Hawkins; a portrait of Washington; a picture presented by Mr. Willard P. Boileau of the house not very far from West Point, formerly occupied by Senor Don Tomas Estrada Palma, afterwards the first president of Cuba, from which the Cuban Revolution was in large measure conducted; a picture of Columbus at the Court of Spain, presented together with a letter by Mrs. Rev. Dr. Thos. H. McCallie and Mrs. Dr. D. L. Duncan; a letter from Mrs. Captain Hobson; an ivy leaf from the garden of the Alhambra Palace, and two views of the Cuarto Espanol, one of which shows Senorita Dona Susana Gouldy Joseph, twice elected president of the Sociedad, holding back the drapery from the portrait of Admiral Cervera. These two views were sent to Spain to the widow, children and grandchildren of the admiral and caused articles in two Spanish newspapers. Members of the Sociedad visiting Spain may expect even more than the usual charming Spanish courtesy which does so much to make delightful a trip in that historic land.

The Jolly Few Society

History of the J. K. S. Society

The J. K. S. Society was the first society of Central High School organized entirely by students, independent of instructors and of outside influence. This truly student movement had a twofold object: The forwarding of Central's fame by the stimulation of literary effort and the mutual benefit of its members. Starting from a small beginning this club gradually enlarged its membership and at the same time its purpose.

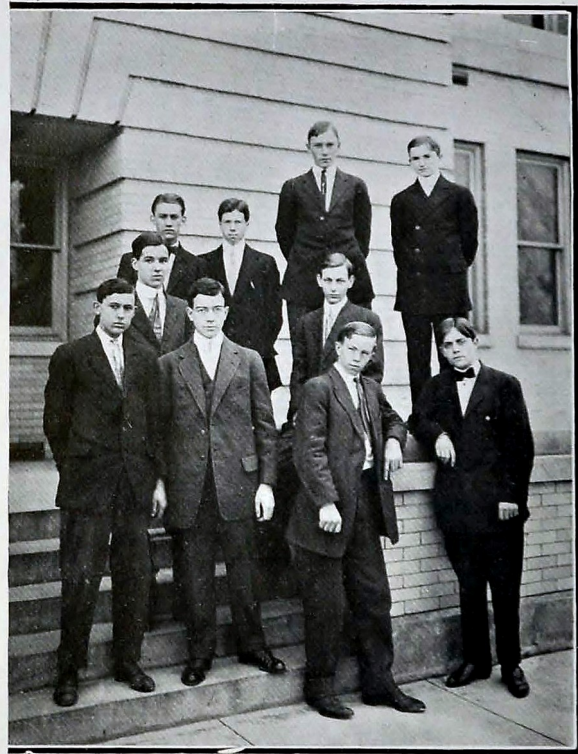

Increased importance was given to the club in the fall when the faculty appointed Mrs. L. M. Russel as sponsor. From that time J. K. S. has steadily advanced to its many aims, one of which was accomplished when the organization presented medals for the first and second best essays written in competition. The successful contestants were Ernest Taylor and Grace Scrutchfield. It was decided to present these prizes annually.

With an increased and active membership, every effort of the club points to a bright and prosperous future, during which prosperity the J. K. S. hopes to spread such laurels of honor as it duly owes at the feet of dear old Central High School.

BOYS' LITERARY SOCIETY

Boys' Literary Society

Late in the fall of 1910, after the machine work was in perfect running order and the football team had come off victorious, it was thought that we might contest with the other schools in a battle of brains and show them that Central could do more than win in the athletic field. Heretofore, we had known what it meant to go down in defeat before the orators of other schools.

This experience was the very goad we needed to stir us up to real work. Several of the Central boys got together and formed the "Central Literary Society." They elected officers, and proceeded in the usual manner.

In the meetings of this society, the boys have their weekly contests in which they learn to overcome stage fright and to gain confidence in themselves. Each speaker, endeavoring to make his arguments a little more forceful, finds his weak spots and corrects them here. Here also, by a sifting process, the best speakers are picked out and are chosen to debate with the other schools.

This society formed, with the other two Prep-schools of the city, "The Inter-Prep Debating Association of Chattanooga," and drew up rules and by-laws for governing same. It was decided for McCallie to debate Dickinson High School and for Central to contend with the winner of this debate. It was further agreed that the winning school should be proclaimed Champion of the city. To seal this agreement, each school advanced $3, which sum is to be used in the purchase of a pennant for the champion school.

McCallie won over Dickinson High School in their debate, which was held at the Dickinson School Auditorium.

The subject for the debate with Central was submitted by McCallie and immediately taken before the society where it was debated several times after which, it was thought best for Central to take the affirmative of the question, which was: "Resolved, that Tennessee should adopt compulsory education for children between the ages of 6 and 15 years."

Messrs. Haenseler and Spencer were selected to represent our school. On the night of the debate both schools were well represented and many, also, from Dickinson High School were present. The McCallie boys seemed a little over confident, expecting an easy victory like the last one, but great was their surprise if not admiration, as our boys crushed argument after argument, and displayed technique and style far beyond what they thought us capable.

The decision was rendered in favor of the affirmative by a unanimous vote of the judges, whereby we won not only this one victory, but the championship, and, of course, the pennant which will be hung in the Senior Hall with the other trophies of the year.

This victory was the result of practice gained in the society, so that instead of our school having to depend on one or two of its students to meet our rivals in the forum, she has, as a result, many well-trained debaters, capable of doing valiant battle with their adversaries.

In the meeting room of this society can be seen a framed copy of our constitution, together with a group picture of its first members. The boys of the class of 1911 can go out feeling that their literary organization has marked a beginning for the classes to follow.

Girls' Basket-ball Team

Plenty of good material, spirit and hard work developed a team at Central this year which proved to be the best that has ever represented the school. This claim is based on the fact that they defeated last year's championship team by a rather decisive score. This game was the hardest which the team had to contend, for the games scheduled with the University of Chattanooga and Sale Creek were won easily.

The most interesting part of the season was centered around the struggle between the Whites and the Reds. Each one of these games was a fight to the death, and it was only after a great deal of hair pulling, etc., that the Whites finally came out ahead.

But one of this year's team graduates, so prospects for next year are unusually bright.

FOOTBALL TEAM 1910

A Review of Central's Football Season

At the beginning of the scholastic year of 1910-11 at Central, only three of last year's Champion team reported to Coach Rike for football practice. The remainder of the squad that reported was inexperienced; many of the candidates being Freshmen.

Coach Rike at once saw that he had a difficult task before him to develop a team that could beat the Dickinson High team. With this one purpose in view the team was trained against many of the strongest teams in this locality, and played this first regular game with the Collegians of Athens University at Athens. In this game although our team was defeated by one touchdown in the last minute of play, their showing was considered more than creditable.

On account of the good showing made by the Central team in this game, several of the strongest preps and college teams in the state were challenged. Of these many challenges only two were accepted; one of the Knoxville High team of Knoxville and the other by the strong Mooney team of Harriman. The first game was played at Knoxville against the Knoxville team on Wait Field. This game abounded in fast team work and spectacular feats by the Central players. The result of which was a nothing to nothing tie.

The first regular home game of the season was played against the husky Mooney team. In this game although our team was outweighed by at least twenty pounds, they played good ball and managed to hold the visitors to a small score of 22 to 0.

Near the close of this game Coach Rike received a telegram notifying him of his wife's serious illness in Ohio. He caught the first home-bound train and when he reached home he found his wife so seriously ill that it was impossible to leave her.

His absence from the school necessitated a cancellation of many games. The game with High had been called off on account of the ineligibility of one of the players, to the great disappointment of the Central players.

Shortly after the death of his wife Coach Rike returned to school and managed to get a game with the Harriman High Team of Harriman. The game was played at Harriman and here the Central team showed its great class and captured the game by the score of 48 to 0. This game was the greatest success of the season and the Central High players were greatly disappointed in that they could not arrange a game with the Dickinson team.

BASKET-BALL TEAM 1911

Central's Successful Basket-Ball Season

Central High's basket-ball season of 1910-11 was the most successful that any Central team has ever enjoyed. Our team played a total of ten games and in these games it was victorious by a large score every time. The total number of points scored by Central amounted to 320, while the number made by the opponents amounted to only 153.

By defeating the Asheville High team, the prep champions of Western North Carolina, Central won the championship of Western North Carolina. By winning numerous victories over every local team and many East Tennessee teams, Central won the prep championship of East Tennessee.

Although the schedule was rather difficult it proved none too hard for the thoroughly trained players and they practiced regularly so that they were in condition at all times.

The games were played on Friday night of each week, and the attendance was good at every game.

The team this year was composed of players who were in the game not for individual honor, but for the glory of Central High. The team this year has done more towards the development of Central's good old school spirit than any heretofore.

Manager Harrington and Coach Rike are both to be congratulated for their untiring efforts in making the Central team the best in the state. In the first place Manager Harrington arranged a schedule that suited the team in every respect. He arranged the schedule so that Central's hardest fights came at a time when the team was best prepared.

Coach Rike is to be congratulated on his success in developing a championship team from a squad of fellows, many of whom had never played basket-ball before.

At the opening of the season it seemed that Central had little hope of winning the championship of East Tennessee. But in a few weeks conditions began to look better, and from their practice they showed that they would be strong contenders for the championship.

TRACK SQUAD

Central Track Team

For the first time in her history, Central has this year organized a track team. A squad of about fifty boys started to work in cross country running as soon in the spring as the weather would permit. Daily practice in running from two to five miles developed good wind and put the squad in excellent shape for the finer training which Coach Rike started on immediately after the Basketball season closed.

Every advantage in the way of apparatus for field events has been given to the team, and at the time of going to press Central is looking forward with brightest hopes to capturing the championship of East Tenn.

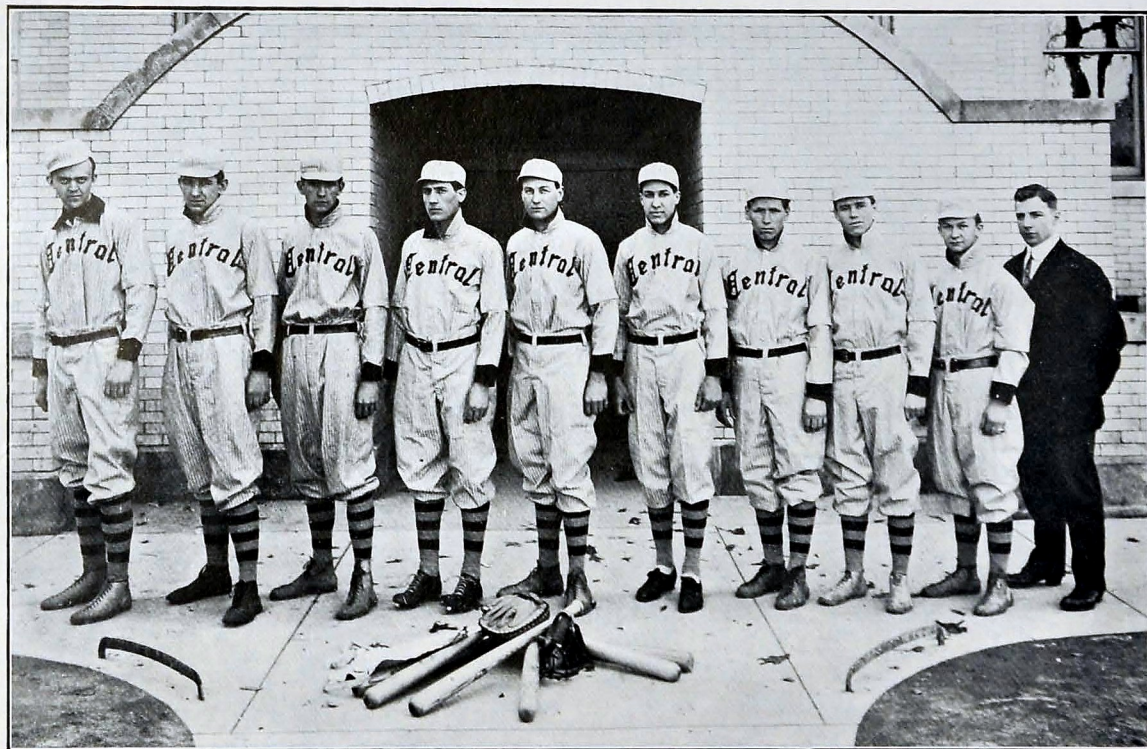

Whether we accomplish this feat or not, we feel justly proud of the efforts of our first year, and shall look forward to next year with even greater hopes for success.

BASEBALL TEAM 1911

Baseball "Dope"

Anything written at the present time must be, of necessity, plain unadulterated "dope." However, having implicit confidence in our Coach and Central Spirit and judging from past experiences in all lines of activities, we feel reasonably justified in prophesying a successful season.

At the present time the team has been practicing for about three weeks and is already working in absolute harmony and perfecting itself in the finer points of the game. The team will in all likelihood be much stronger at the bat than in the field.

Up to date no games have been played but the management has already scheduled nine contests with some of the strongest teams in his vicinity. We are expecting our Baseball Team to duplicate the performances of the year on the basketball floor.

A Prophetic Vision

One balmy night in April, I had been studying very hard, until, becoming sleepy, I started to bed. When I turned off the light the mellow-moon-light poured through the windows and the night looked so inviting I decided to take a short walk. I started up the side of Lookout Mountain—not more than a hundred yards distant—and I was so filled with the beauty of the night that I kept wending my way upward. Then I happened to think how beautiful the view would be from Point Rock, under such perfect conditions, and soon I reached the brow of Chattanooga's majestic sentinel.

The view from here was sublime: afar Walden's Ridge and Missionary Ridge were silhouetted in the moonlight, and far below, the majestic Tennessee wound its silvery flood to form the outline of a mocassin, and finally disappeared in a dark doorway between the shining cliffs of Walden's Ridge and the somber forested sides of Raccoon

Mountain. A hundred yards or so below me, the Cravens House lay nestled among the huge cherry trees and the moonlight glistened upon the monuments near by. Now and then the heavy fragrance of wild honeysuckle and sweet shrub floated up to me through the balmy air.

To get a better view and to feel the satisfaction of climbing, I mounted Umbrella Rock and, facing North, took my seat upon its edge. While feasting upon the sublimity of the scene, I became vaguely conscious of some uncanny presence, and on turning I saw an apparition that caused me to spring to my feet, and stand shaking on the rock.

Before me stood the ghost of an Indian Medicine Man, garbed in a dress peculiar to that office. He was tall and well built, and his features were of the conventional, Cherokee Indian type. For a few minutes he stood like a bronze statute and then in the most wonderful sign language he told me that he had been a Chickamauga Medicine

Man and that he came back from the Happy Hunting Grounds to Point Rock, once each year to survey the former domain of his people. He held out two shells, one in each hand. The shells, the Indian spirit said, "Were filled with a liquid of wondrous power." The contents of the left hand shell would on being quaffed reveal the past of whatever the drinker was thinking at that immediate time, while the contents of the right hand shell would reveal the future under the same conditions. He extended both, permitting me to choose one. Nothing is so fascinating as the contemplation of what is yet to be, and accordingly I chose the right hand shell. I had been thinking that afternoon of what would become of our soon-to-be-disbanded Senior Class, and seized with a desire to know what the future had in store for us, I quaffed the contents of the shell. Immediately my senses were quickened and I realized that prophetic vision was mine.

First, I saw a brilliantly lighted store on Market street. In the large show-cases were exhibits of rats, puffs, psyches and other hair goods. On the show-windows was the following inscription, "Robert and Robert, expert Manicurists and Hair Dressers," and in the interior of the store, dressed immaculately, their complexion and hands as white and dainty as those of a girl, waiting on several lady customers, were Robert Faris and Robert Cannon.

Quickly the scene changed to that of a backwoods farm. Out in an old field, a typical Reuben in his green clothes and brogan shoes was taking his mule to the barn at noon time. As he neared the door of the ramshackle farmhouse, a feminine counterpart to the man appeared at the kitchen door and cried, "Hurry up, old man, grub is ready." "Allright, old woman," was the answer Stewart Lawwill made to his wife whom I recognized as the former dainty Miss Dorothy Rice.

Now an academy with its green campus came into view, but in vain did I look for an athletic field. Over the gate entrance was written, "Magnum Quattuor, School of English, History, Latin, and Home Economics," and entering the Academy I found four Bostonian-looking men: Bill Beck, Don Lockwood, Tom Clark, and Paul Elmore teaching the above subjects in their respective order.

Next, I beheld two weazoned old maids, with knitting in their hands and cats at their feet. One of them, Miss Georgia Mason, was telling the other, Miss Ruth McFarland, how she had had a chance at one time to change her name, but she just loved Mason so well that she wouldn't. Nevertheless, during her recital of this fact, she had to wipe several gnats out of her eyes with her handkerchief.

Suddenly, the scene changes and strains of music assail my ears. And oh, what music! It seemed as if the very rocks would melt. Presently I saw the source of these Heavenly strains, Misses Eualie Noland, Sara Patton and Ocie Schoff, accompanied at the piano by Charles Iler, and Miss Avis Shelton with the violin were giving a grand concert in honor of former Miss Frances Few, who after vainly trying to elude him while abroad, had at length been captured by the great Duke of Essex. Although Charles was so engaged in playing, nevertheless, at every possible opportunity he would cast shy glances at a dashing young belle in the audience, Miss Nannie Gothard, who when rewarding his love-lorn looks with a smile caused that young Adonis to blush profusely.

Then the concert gave way to a far different scene. On a platform at a crowded street corner, Miss Susie Gould was giving forth a violent suffragette speech, with Misses Katherine Cowles and Winnie Reeves waiting for their time to come to give a deadly stab at horrid man. But one familiar sight greeted my eyes, Miss Goldie Miller was disposing of Suffragette badges at a booth near by and not a single person, not even the great woman hater and "Life" cartoonist, Rose Scott, came within hearing distance without buying a badge at "Only fifty cents."

Next I saw two learned men, Henson W. Schoolfield, A.M., Ph.D., M.S. and Fred Prentice with a whole alphabet after his name in a profound argument, as to whether or not, Nero was playing "Casey Jones" during the burning of Rome. Also I saw Louis Johnson and Joe Will Nicholson each with all the scientific appellations from A to Izzard, hooked on to their names, engaged in another discussion as to how many kilomons there were in a kilowat.

But my, how stunning those fair damsels did look, four worse flirts never hit the cement. And to think, that Misses Inda McTeer, Mary Jane Trimby, Clara French and Grace Sheridan should have turned out thus. However there was a sad look in Inda's eye, no doubt caused by the sudden cooling of her erstwhile Bartley.

Paul and Clyde Hodge were perfecting a new kind of air ship and soon the exclusive "four hundred" were dumfounded at the air ship elopement of the Hodge brothers with Misses Frankie Huber and Mary Range.

Far out on a little island in the south seas I saw two simple souls, Misses Lillie Johnson and Margaret Nicholson, who having become devotees to the great works of Miss Lucille Hunt on the vanities and emptiness of the world, had given up worldly things and were leading the simple life upon this sunny island.

Such a sport as I did see next: Before a lobster palace on the Great White Way, Tom Solomon, a veritable dandy, was trying to divide his attentions between two fascinating young actresses, whom he had in tow, Misses Marion Bicknell and Bessie Briscoe.

The scene changed to the inside of a Matrimonial Agency in Wauhatchie, Tenn., Luther Young was at the desk writing a letter to Al Kelly, Mayor of Scratch Gravel, informing him that he had about completed the negotiations with a Miss Donna Durand to become Al's betterhalf.

Now who would have thought that Central had produced such literary talent in her class of 1911. I was dumfounded to see "Cutey" Itheatt sitting in the editorial chair of the Ladies Home Journal, directing the fashion plates, for the next issue and writing an editorial upon the evil effects of baseball on the heart action and that hoop rolling should be made compulsory in place of such unlady like exercise.

And then what more dumbfounded me, Matthew Elrod, a swell little sport, was reading aloud from a gaily colored book, entitled, "Guide to Flirtations," by Robert Peay and Henry Blackwill. I heard him read aloud from the book, a paragraph beginning thus: "We, the authors of this invaluable guide, have after long and thorough experience with the fairer sex, found that the best way to a woman's heart is"

From this scene of scientific love making, the picture changed to that of a large brown stone mansion. A pompous, jolly broker ascended the steps and entering the reception hall was met by a demure little woman who reached up and kissed Fred Brown, who in turn reached down and kissed little Nell whom I recognized as Miss Nellie Wise Turner.

The next scene was long and most wonderful. Jesse Shaver, a noted astronomer while gazing at the Heavens was able on account of the distance of his eyes from the earth to discover many new things and one day he discovered a new planet, which he scrutinized so closely that after a profound investigation he reported that the women of this new planet, named Thora, did not wear rats in their hair.

D. Spencer made an expedition to Thora in one of the Hodge Brothers balloons and on coming back reported that Thora was inhabited by a race of newly created people, as yet with no fixed habits. They were in a plastic state and there was a fine opportunity of making a model people of them by sending school teachers, preachers, etc.

The response was immediate. Misses Ruth Church and Ella Davis went at once to start the little tots on the upward road to be initiated later into Greek, Latin and classical lore by Misses Anna Beck and Bessie White. Misses Vina Wade, Ruth Stegall and Amelia Dickert have charge of Domestic Science, teaching them how to produce artificial leather out of batter cakes and many other important things. Miss Ellen Converse taught them "Red Wing," and in company with Miss Rowena Sauls showed the girls how to play basketball and soon under their training their picked team had beaten every girls' team on our Earth except Central's, which they would not play both on account of respect and fear that they would be beaten.

Bill Allin and DeForest Spencer introduced football and other sports among the Thoran boys and instilled in them the Winning Central Spirit.

Misses Esther Wilson and Daisy Deakins took the arts of dancing, flirting and other delightful exercises to the Thorans and were made princesses within two weeks. But Thora had caused great changes in the United States. Of course we claimed Thora because an American was its discoverer, but we differed among ourselves as to the best way of dealing with the Thorans. In Congress the two opposing leaders, Henry Haensaler and Tom McMillian, had a great debate in which eloquence flowed as never before over the question as to whether they should permit the Thorans to pick their teeth with broom-straws or goose-quills.

Things are beginning to look interesting and I thought that my future was about to be revealed when Jesse looking from the earth at a Thoran belle saw that she was also looking at him and that she smiled very sweetly. The shock was so great to Jesse causing him to blush so profusely that red darts shot from his face, enabling me to recover from my trance. The moon was shining as brightly as before but the Indian spook was gone, and slowly I descended the mountain side, my mind tingling with the wonderful things revealed to me.

CREED F. BATES.

Freshman History

I am young and my friends say I am green and fresh. I don't believe them but still I do not doubt their sincerity of motive and can treat them with silent contempt. I am so glad I am a freshman for we have the best class in the school. When I said this to a Senior the other day she laughed right out loud and wouldn't tell me the joke. I like Central very much but I have to study awful hard. I even have to take my Algebra home sometimes; but that's because I like it so much. (Please forgive me for that, Mr. George Washington.)

I have got to stop now because the Editor said I couldn't say much. Next year though I can do whatever I want to. I will feel so well acquainted next fall and when the poor little freshies with their scared faces come around I can laugh at them and make them feel ridiculous.

Good-bye. You'll hear more of me later if I live through my next quiz.

Sophomore Class History

In the fall of 1909 Central High School opened wide her doors to receive two hundred and ten homely, but brilliant Freshmen. Throughout the entire year the faculty, also Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors were astonished by the marvelous feats, and grand accomplishments of Miss Greve's "Little Freshies."

Of course we were attacked in derision by the Sophomores. However, we did not object for were we not well protected from attacks of all description by our gallant and heroic "Little Wolf?"

While Freshmen we had visions of the day when we would become Sophomores. When at last our dream was realized, and we became full fledged Sophomores, our joy knew no bounds.

We have endeavored to maintain and increase the excellent reputation which we established during our Freshman year. We have succeeded not only in maintaining but greatly enhancing our reputation and renown.

The Sophomore Class has representatives in every department of Central High School. Our representative on the Editorial Staff is "Our Doll," of whom we are very proud. We all honor and adore Joe Vesey, our charming representative in oratory.

The Sophomore Class proudly brings forth, "The Tragic Trio," that inseparable three who exert a great deal of occult power during the basket-ball season. Our class has also won literary honors. We do not object to the warm days of "May," for we are well supplied with "Ice."

The entire Sophomore Class is furnished with shoes, for we are fortunate to possess a quaint "Little Shoemaker."

One of our dearest possessions is a beautiful "Violet," with eyes of heavenly blue.

Since our class has made such a remarkable beginning we intend to maintain our reputation and to improve our opportunities through the coming years, until we graduate with honors and shall be known to fame, as "The Illustration Class of 1913." G. C. C.—'13.

History of Junior Class

All Freshmen as they enter a school are for the most part observers during the first year of their sojourn, but not so with the present Junior Class; for from the first its members have been in the contest for honors, not only in athletics, but also in the realm of oratory and literature.

When we gathered in the Freshman Hall in early September of 1908, as the second Freshman class of dear old Central, no one realized the possibilities which lay before us, and surely no one dreamed that some of our number would play an important part as they since have. The honorable "Buck" had not yet made himself famous nor had our many other celebrities made their appearance.

In those days Central was young and many of our present activities were wanting, and indeed with the single exception of the oratorical contest, at which we were well represented, no opportunity for our appearance in the public presented itself until the Annual Junior-Senior Banquet, which did not occur until near the close of the session. At that time, however, we were so well represented by Miss Nannie Shugart that several members of the faculty pronounced us the most promising class within their experience.

Our second year did not disprove these flattering statements, for the sides having an increase representation on the athletic field more interest was shown in oratory, while a marked interest was developed in literature. The oratorical preliminaries brought out several contestants and one of our number succeeded in capturing one of the places as school representative.

During the present year we have been given many chances to prove our worth, and who can say that the test has not been successfully past? Our representatives will be found on the athletic teams, on the honor roll and in fact will be found occupying prominent places in all of the school activities.

As the year draws to a close and we look back over our short career, we may well be proud of our record and have every reason to believe that during our Senior year we will be able to maintain the high standard of dear old Central.

The Grades of the Industrious and the Indolent

Blessed is she that useth not a translation, nor getteth aid from her neighbor, nor goeth to class without her lesson.

But her delight is in translating long passages of Virgil, and over her Virgil doth she pore day and night.

And she shall be a blessing to those who have not their lessons for she shall read long and shall be called the star pupil of her class.

But the lazy are not so. They can not read on recitation and they shall be called stupid.

Therefore they shall not be exempt from examination, nor given excellent grades on their report cards.

For their teacher knoweth their ways and the grades of the industrious are nineties, but the grades of the indolent are forties. G. M. '11.

PAUL ELMORE:—"I love the name of Mary."

MAMIE HARTWIG:—"Waitresses may come and waitresses may go, but I stay on forever."

ESTHER WILSON:—"I got permission."

PROF. DARRAH:—"Over five hundred souls."

OCY SCHOFF:—"G E D—We have nothing like this."

Favorite Passtimes

ESTHER WILSON—Eating (we pity the landlady if she eats as much as she chews—the rag).

BILL ALLIN—Sleeping.

CREED BATES—Sitting on a rail fence in the shade.

T. C.—"What makes more noise than two pigs?"

B. A.—"Clara Thompson."

William Brown—"What makes you say that Evelyn Sanders and Grace Patterson are part Persians?"

Alex. Lyle—"Because their tongues Babylon."

The Modern Pyramis and Thisbe—"Paul and Mary in the lunch room."

What is Mr. White's favorite song?—"Work for the night is coming."

Donald Lockwood	J.D.	Debonair	Engineer	Where he succeeds, the merit is all his own.

Valedictory

Now we are saying farewell to the school year of 1910-1911. It has been a busy year, a happy year, crowded full of activities, the broadest and most complex the school has known during its history, and should, therefore, in the nature of things, be the most fruitful, and most highly productive of results of any of its four years. We are leaving behind us the work and associations of our school life at Central, but we are leaving these only for its memories, its friendships, its thousand influences upon our lives we can not lay down; they abide with us. We can not take leave of these things without that about which they all cluster—the school itself rising up before us, the school both as to its influences and its causes. What it has brought us is very real, vividly so, and our minds go back to other classes and other years, and even to the beginning of its career.

No one could observe this school in regard to the work it does, its growth, the honorable rank it has attained among the preparatory schools of Chattanooga and, indeed, of the state, and not feel that behind it lies strong propelling causes. It has not the look of a thing that came by magic or accident, but of a fact that came about through the working out of the high thoughts of strong men. Hamilton County has been brought forcibly to the notice of the public because of her progressiveness in matters of education, and especially because of her most advanced step in this direction,—the successful solution of the problem of the County High School. In the matter of her public schools the state is wholly sovereign, she may adapt whatsoever she chooses from the varied successes and failures of her neighbors and of other Nations even, but in this regard she oweth no man anything. So the agencies that produced Central High School lie naturally within the state itself. They run back to the legislature which grants the county the privilege of making this expenditure of money; the County Court had a large share in this work; likewise the Board of Education, that memorable first board, upon whose shoulders rested the weighty task of arranging the infinite details necessary to the launching of this enterprise. The history of the County schools in Hamilton County lies wholly within the administration of County Superintendent J. B. Brown who to such a degree has he fostered their growth that he has established a standard which his successors will have difficulty in reaching. Central High School, as it is to day, with its varied departments and activities is pre-eminently the work of Principal A. E. Darrah, whose name throughout the state is the synonym for progress and executive ability. The individuality of the school is his, and in this sense he has been aptly called, "The Man Who Made Central." But for Central High School at all, Hamilton County is indebted, deeply indebted, to state Superintendent of Education R. L. Jones. He, with the deep conviction of what the state owes to its youth, first undertook the grave task of incorporating the County High School into the public school system of Hamilton County. Through his efforts the public was educated up to the undertaking. His own zeal lighted the fires of enthusiasm in other breasts. During its speculative stage he was recognized as the champion of the undertaking, and now since it is accomplished, he is recognized as the man who saw a great possibility and brought it to pass, and he will be remembered as a benefactor and a distinguished citizen.

Our large class of 66 members is the testimonial of the efficiency of his work, and the scope of its benefits. We came from every part of Hamilton County and are going out as graduates representing every department of the school. Some of us are trained teachers, some go out as stenographers and bookkeeper; some are trained in mechanical work; some in domestic science, besides the large number who are going out worthy representatives of the Academic Department. We have been bound together by our work and experiences in common, but now we are parting to go many ways. For many of us school days have not yet ended; these go in different directions to universities for years of study yet. But wherever we go, whatever may be our future life, there will always be for us one magic word—Central—that will have power to call up spirits from the past, memories of our life at the dear old school. To all the old associations we are saying farewell; to teachers and pupils a thousand good wishes and farewell.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

My wife's cow, of which she is very proud, was recently very sick. Our veterinary failed to give relief. A friend suggested that I try your Medicated Salt Brick. I did so. The cow has licked it away. The change is more than wonderful. She is getting fat as of yore. Gives $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 4 gallons of milk daily.

Pianos and Where to Buy Them

The purchase of a piano involves an expenditure which suggests great care in its selection. The importance of dealing with a thoroughly reliable firm whose guarantee is unquestioned is a most valuable consideration. The reputation which we have obtained for honesty and fair dealing, based on our experience of nearly forty years in the manufacture and sale of pianos, has gained for us the full confidence of piano buyers throughout the territory in which we operate.

The national reputation of the celebrated STARR and RICHMOND Pianos are in themselves evidence, if there were no other, of the fact that quality is our first consideration.

We do not have to resort to fake selling schemes, etc., to promote the sale of our goods. Through our factory-to-home plan we are able to sell our instruments direct to the public, eliminating the dealer's or middle profit, and rendering it possible for one in the most moderate circumstances to own a good piano.
