Foreword

In the Champion of 1918 we have endeavored to characterize, as fully as is possible, the life of the students at Central High School. Issued in time of war, it is concise, nevertheless comprehensive. We hope that it will be a pleasant reminder of the happy days spent here. As such, this issue awaits your judgment.

Dedication

It is with much pride that we dedicate this issue of the CHAMPION to these, our former comrades at Central, who are now so nobly championing the cause of Liberty and of Democracy. To these and to the cause we pledge our loving and loyal support.

Editorial

Another volume has issued from the printing-press of Father Time; another leaf has been turned in the record of Central's achievements in work and in play, in study and in service.

From the raw material offered her four years ago, Central has again fashioned her annual product, a senior class ready to graduate.

What have the four years meant to that class? They have had their good times and their bad; they have seen Central on the gridiron, on the track, on the diamond and on the debating floor. They have won and they have lost; who has not? But in either case they have had the satisfaction of knowing that they have done their best, and have put their whole hearts in the struggle for Central.

As they bid farewell to the halls of Central, we wonder whither Fate will lead them. Some, no doubt, will hurry to take their places in the maelstrom of the business world; some, we hope, will continue their pursuit of knowledge in our higher institutions of learning. Whatever they do, we feel sure they will never forget the days spent in dear old Central, their loyal classmates, their faithful teachers, and that they will carry into every walk of life on which they set their feet the magnificent, unquenchable, unconquerable Central spirit.

History of the Class of '18

It is the year 9999, and science has been brought to a high degree of perfection. Professor Ann A. Lizer and Doctor Kris T. Lization have just discovered a compound which will restore life to any organism which once possessed it, and they are anxious to demonstrate the merits of their discovery to their colleagues.

They are all looking about for a suitable subject on which to try their compound when Archaeologist Dig M. Out comes in with two petrified bodies. After some persuasion, he allows the chemists to apply their great discovery to the mummies, while their interested fellow-scientists gather eagerly around them. Slowly the substance takes effect; gradually the bodies take on renewed life, and at last they spring up galvanically and grasp hands. Hark! They speak in a primitive, but not unknown tongue.

"Why, Hugh Huff!"

"Why, Mac Roberts!"

Then a strange silence falls over both wizened mummies, broken only by the buzz of the generator which made the life-giving substance. At last they jerk spasmodically, and the drier of the two mummies jerks out:

"You make me think of old days at Central High School. Say, Mac, do you remember that day in September, 1914, when we entered Central?"

"You bet I do," squeaked the other specimen.

"You remember the football games and joy-meetings, of course? Then you remember a bunch of us had to join the societies to keep them from dying out. Then at the last of the year came that Freshman picnic; that was when Milton Fletcher fell off a bluff trying to get flowers for the ladies. When we entered our second year we were a conceited bunch, but Bate's Algebra soon took that out of us. That was the year when some of our number organized the Wireless Club. I think they were trying to catch some of the Kaiser's messages to his agents in this country. However, the Government thought the club would do more harm than good and ordered them to close up.

"Then came our Junior year. As soon as we organized our class we began to raise money for the banquet. Our first attempt was the box supper. Mr. Zeigler said we were old-fashioned, but we had a good time. Then came the Junior Carnival. If we could have put that Carnival on the road, we would all have become rich. You remember Bowser Gennoe, don't you—the boy who could make a typewriter or piano talk? He got a little brass button for his speed on the typewriter. You remember Irene Morris, don't you—that girl who talked herself to death her last two years? Fred Stutz began to develop into Sleeping Beauty along about that time, you know. Then you remember that Bascom Farrier, Wilson Gustwick, Paul Leamon and Sidney Snyder joined the army.

"Then when we became the Senior Class! I can never forget that. The B. V. L. L. Frat became known at this time, and the Terrible Four became terrible. That was some fuss we had over an Annual, but it finally came out right. Then came Commencement when we—"

Crash! went the apparatus generating the life-giving substance, and after a few spasmodic jerks and quivers the bodies resumed their petrified form.

Meanwhile Professor Ann A. Lizer and Doctor Kris T. Lization had been unconsciously inhaling the mysterious gas with all its life-giving properties. By this time they had become so affected with surplus energy that the slight start and withdrawal from danger given by their colleagues was so exaggerated in their case that they burst violently from the room and ran with frantic speed down the street, out-distancing all pursuers in a moment. They were never heard of again, and their wonderful secret is lost to the world until some one of Miss Embrey's Chemistry sharks rediscovers it.

Prophecy

TIME — 1935. PLACE — Rossville.

Last week I stopped at the office of the "Midnight Moon" to see the editor, Marie Hartman. Often when I need recreation I stop to see her, and she allows me to read the books she is reviewing, and she also tells me the latest news. When I went in she said, "I just hoped you would come along today; I'm reviewing James McCallie's latest book. Make yourself comfortable until I find it. Here's the last issue of the 'Moon.'"

I sat down and glanced first at the sport page. Roy Reynolds, the champion boxer, was expected to meet Roy Peak that night to defend his title. That was enough excitement for a while, so I turned to the social section, which is conducted by Mary Moore. The only thing which interested me there was this announcement, "Miss Vashti Ault, a leader of society, entertained last evening for Miss Amilda Knox, who is soon to become the bride of a prominent young doctor, Hugh Huff."

Attracted by a loud noise, Marie and I went to the window to see a passing parade. It was Fletcher's Greater Shows, featuring the Handspring Clown, Eunice Bivens and the Economical Dress Designer, Inda Copenhaver. "For ten cents," a poster said, "Miss Copenhaver will design a one-yard dress for anyone." (I noticed in the "Moon" that the great style critic, Dorothy Bressler, says that the dress with the smallest amount of material in it is the most stylish.) Others in the parade were Denton Bass, Agnes Tarr, Alberta Tower and Robert Jones. Mr. Bass is the founder of the North Pole Colony, and the others are prominent figures in this colony. Miss Tarr is official reindeer dietician; Miss Tower is "keeper of the seal" (Winger), which she claims is the only one in captivity worth seeing, and Mr. Jones' occupation is sliding up and down the North Pole to keep off the icicles.

My attention was attracted from the parade by the entrance of a very bemedaled person. I looked twice before I could see through the coat of the medals that the wearer was Genevra Proffitt. She wished to be interviewed, because she said the president of Peru had given her the fifty-seventh medal she had received this year, the purpose was merely for the added effect to her costume.

Miss Proffitt had barely finished when Senator Mary Roby stormed in, raging at the editor, because in the Moon there has been no account of her last speech in the Senate. She insisted that it was intentional and that her lawyer, Ether Seagle, would investigate the matter.

Just then Vashti Springfield, dirty and greasy, came running out of the pressroom to say that the press was broken and asked that some one call Mr. Holland, the mechanic, to come and fix it.

While Marie did that, I read the account of the divorce suit of Frank Beck against Mrs. Mabel Smith Beck. Mr. Beck claims that he gave his wife $194 with which to buy a pair of silk hose and that she paid 98c more for them and charged it to him. The case had not been settled.

After Marie got the mechanic, we went to lunch at Irene Bennett's cafeteria. It is quite a popular place, patronized by various types of people. There were a few teachers there with whom I was acquainted: Bessie Killian, who is teaching history; Stella Jones, conducting classes in mechanics, and Nella Hullender, teaching domestic science. We sat at the table with Lucille Hale, now world-famous for her translations of Vergil, and Hilda Milligan, who is at home on a furlough from her mission field in Africa.

We were entertained during lunch listening to Bowser Gennoe trying to convince Frieda Mattil that home arts and music should consolidate. As we went out, we had a chance to speak to Helen Hershey, the singer of the age, who has just finished her world tour with Anice Redmond as her accompanist.

On our way back to the office we passed the new school for teaching cubical art, which is conducted by the Misses Stark. I wanted to stop at a movie to see the "Mixups of Mildred," featuring Mildred Allen, but Marie said she had to stop at the Ira Jackson Hospital to see Jewell Robinson, the head nurse, in the children's ward, so I went with her. Jewell was chosen for her responsible position on account of her gentle voice.

While Marie went to see Jewell, I visited Laura Grandin, who had been severely injured, when the street car, which she was running, ran into a wagon loaded with hay and driven by Robert Condra. No one else on the car was hurt except the conductor, Lillian Gross, who was gossiping on the front platform; her injuries were slight. Laura is doing splendidly, owing, perhaps, to the quality of her food. Mary Zeigler is the cook in this hospital, and she gets chickens from Byrd Brown's chicken farm; vegetables from Rachael Coster's truck garden, and milk from Leona McDonald's dairy.

Back near the office, again, we saw Thomas Guthrie, barber, chasing Barnwell Fleming and Harry McVeigh down the street, calling them to come back and have a haircut, because it was no longer stylish for poets to have long, flowing locks.

As we entered the office, Dulcie Pippin arose and burst forth into poetic rhapsody — they say she has poetic license — Marie had to call her office boy, Harry Cate, to show her to the door. Then she told me that Gertrude Weber had been in to see her a few days before. Gertrude is an English professor in the same college in which Geraldine Ellis is "math" professor, and Irene Morris teaches swimming.

I asked about Clemmie Harris and McLemore Roberts. "They're living near New York now, and poor Mary Jo Thompson is still wearing black. Oh, yes, and Fred Stutz and Raymond Hudson are wearing crepe around their hat brims, because Clara Scholze and Irene Holland have gone to Hawaii. Raymond said he tried all his charms with the violin and Fred wasted his very best arguments, but the fascinating music of Hawaii was greater than all these, even though" —

Just at this point Wilbur Reynolds, the cub reporter of the "Moon," came rushing in, hatless and collarless, to say that Thelma Harvin, president of the Society for Civic Improvement Among Mice," had secured the great orator, Ama Null, to speak to the general public on "Ways and Means of Teaching Mice Oratory."

Marie left me to look for two other reporters whom she could trust not to get excited, Martha Jones and Annie Routh Broom. These she sent to get a report of the entire program, which included Genevieve McCue, who purposed to sing higher than any piano could play, and Marie Bennett, who was to give selections from her latest novel, "The Soul of Drowning Fish."

I picked up the "Moon" again and looked through the want ads, where I saw that Jennie Hedrich and Lela Igou, proprietors of the Central Zoo, wanted several varieties of snakes and would send their snake expert, Elizabeth McVeigh, to inspect them. The next interesting thing was an account of the return of Carlys Bass and Lucina Collins from India, where they had been studying Sanskrit.

Just then my secretary, Nelle Parker, came to tell me that Jessie Roberts and Edna Reed had been waiting for some hours at my home to ask me if I would donate a few valuable old books from my extensive library to aid the library which Agnes Porter is establishing at Stringtown for the conservation of ancient works. I left the office of the "Midnight Moon" rather reluctantly, after having spent a delightful day.

DULCIE PIPPIN

From every spot and nook on earth,
 From spots of sadness, joy and mirth,
 From bright green fields or sunny hills,
 From the city's whirl of noisy mills,
 From east and west we came to thee,
 To take with us that magic key
 Of knowledge above wealth desired,
 Of wisdom that the Gods have fired;
 That love of honor and sacred truth,
 That spirit of liberty, that joy of youth,
 That sweet friendship which never dies,
 That gift above all else we prize.
 Side by side our way we wended,
 Our work and play here now are ended.
 We have shared with each other all that we had,
 Rejoiced at the good, and regretted the bad,
 And now, dear friends, comes the time to part,
 And some sad thoughts are in every heart,
 Yet though our paths may lie as far
 As ocean from ocean, as star from star,
 The self-same spirit in the heart of one
 Through the heart of another will as strongly run.
 No matter where our stars may lead,
 To halls of fame or barren mead,
 Our Alma Mater is the seal
 That makes us one through woe or weal.
 Dear Alma Mater, now at last
 Thy aid and care of us are past.
 For all thy care and all thy aid,
 Accept the thanks of son and maid,
 And may our lives to Central be
 A proof of our great loyalty.

Class Will

WE, the Senior Class of Central High School, the County of Hamilton, State of Tennessee, being of supposedly sound and disposing mind and memory, do hereby make, publish, and declare the following our last will and testament; that is to say: We, the Senior Class, do will the sum of fifty dollars ($50) to the school to be used in repairing the front door steps and buying hinges for the door, as we feel that it is our fault that they have been considerably worn this year by the entrance of hordes of Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors, for we Seniors should never have permitted them to enter.

I, Milton Fletcher, do in a most violent and turbulent manner relinquish all my claims, both major and minor, on Sophomore girls in favor of James Sherrill, trusting he will have as much pleasure in them in years to come as I have had in the past.

We, Wilbur Reynolds, Lucile Hale, Vashti Ault, Genevra Proffitt and Mildred Allen, do with deepest sorrow, will our Latin Ponies to Harry Carpenter, George Farrell, Raulston Ward and Thyra Guthrie, hoping they may be able to ride them as successfully as we have.

We, Jessie Roberts, Lela Igou, Jennie Headrich and Edna Reed joyfully will and bequeath our shorthand genius to Francis Ward, Chester McAllister and Ethel Ortmeier, hoping they will become as efficient as we.

I, Bowser Gennoe, do with the deepest regret, will and bequeath all my love for the beautiful girls of Central High School to Creed Foster.

We, Ama Null, Denton Bass and Robert Condra, do will and bequeath our oratorical genius to such great orators as Creed Howard, Randel Lutton and Harry Null, feeling sure that with these combined powers they will become famous.

I, Marie Hartman, being more generous than the rest, will and bequeath my high and exalted position as President of the Central High School Savings Bank to Carl Brown.

We, Carlys Bass, Anice Redmond, Alberta Tower, Lucinia Collins and Irene Holland, do will and bequeath our stickability to the Junior Class, for we believe that if they stick together as we have, great things can be accomplished.

In a very modest way, I, Irene Morris, bequeath all my calmness to Delta Mishler and Annie Pope, devoutly praying that all may soon be able to see the results of my donation.

I, Thomas Guthrie, being forced by farm duties, do sorrowfully bequeath all my musical talent to Helen Lemons, trusting her friends may see great improvement in her singing by this combination of our talent.

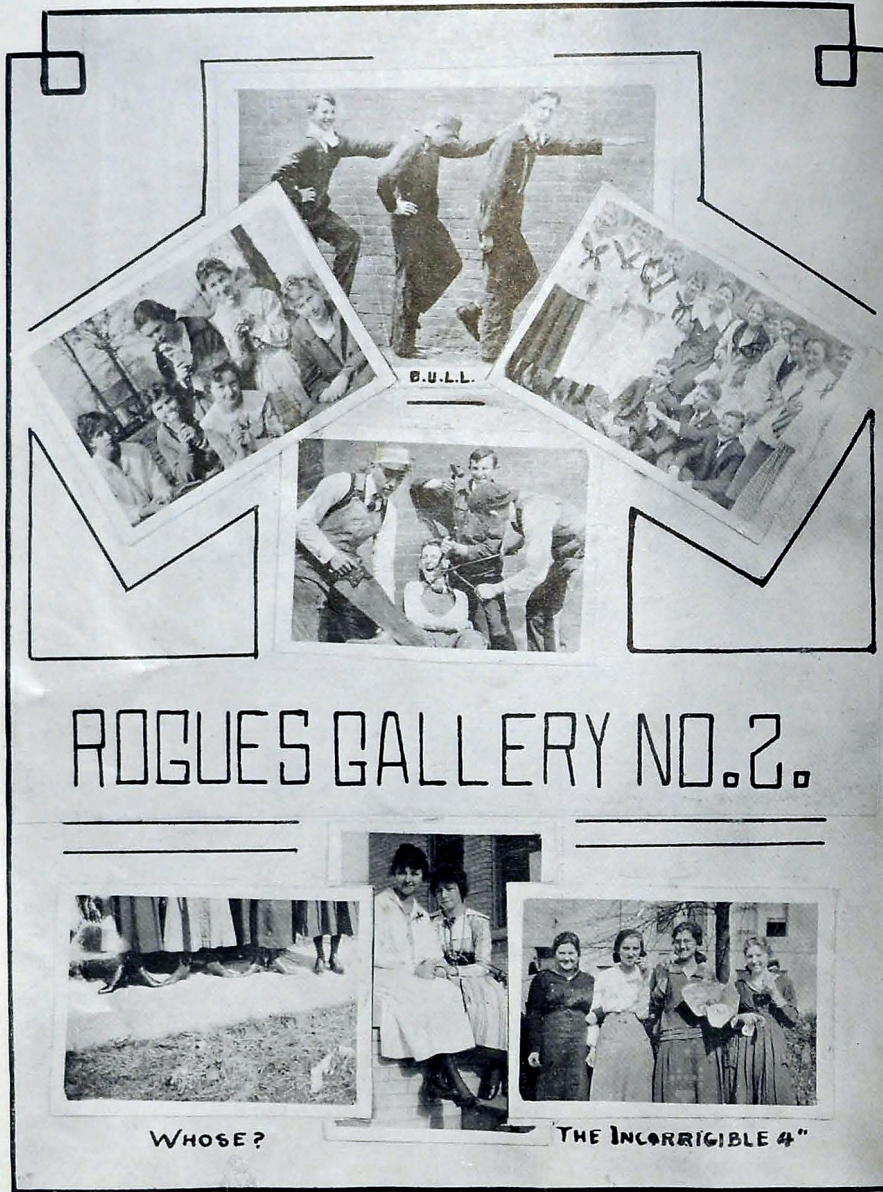

We, Clemmie Harries and McLemore Roberts, in a jolly way, will and bequeath all future prizes at tacky parties to Reita Foster and Farley Winton, hoping they will endeavor to deserve them by living up to the high standard of appearance we set at the aforesaid tacky party.

We, Gertrude Weber, Clara Scholze, Inda Copenhaver and Mabel Smith, with tears in our eyes and regret in our hearts, do will and bequeath our large mirror and all the powder, paint, etc., that remain in our corner to Grace Gentry, requesting that she divide it equally among her friends and that they make as good use of it as we did.

We, Harry Cate, Hugh Huff, Robert Jones, Mary Jo Thompson and Elizabeth McVeigh, do in a most regretful, but unselfish mood, will all the pleasures of Miss Sutton's Spanish class to her classes of next year. It is our desire that they have the same pleasures as we.

I, Roy Reynolds, in a gallant manner, will and bequeath my loving heart to Laura McElhane.

With genuine sorrow, I, Fred Stutz, will and bequeath all my chewing-gum to the Freshman class to be divided equally among them, expecting them to find the flavor as sweet and lasting and as conducive to slumber as I have.

WHOSE?

"THE INCORRIGIBLE 4"

I, Dulcie Pippin, will all my genius as a poet to Dorothy Bachtell, for I believe it will help her to become great.

I, Hilda Milligan, feeling that it is a necessary step, do will and bequeath my Spanish Reader to the Juniors. I hope they will be able to read their Spanish as well as some of the Seniors who borrow this book each day.

We, the "Wicked Five" (Mary Ziegler, Vashti Ault, Lucile Hale, Amilda Knox and Mildred Allen), do will our places on the back row in German class, together with an occasional glance at the McCallie boys' drill, to the unfortunate Juniors who do not know the trouble they are getting into in German class.

In a most dignified manner, we, Irene Bennett and Helen Hershey, will and bequeath our ability in presenting Shakespearean plays to Elizabeth Thrasher, thus encouraging her to become as great a Thespian as we have proven ourselves to be.

We, Mary Roby, Agness Tarr, Marie Bennett, Leona McDonald, Dorothy Bressler and Nella Hullender, in all seriousness, do solemnly will our love for the Faculty to Thyra Guthrie, John Hill and Herman Lamb, trusting that they will also go through school with as clean a record and become as famous as we as "Teacher's Pets."

I, Emma Burgess, do sincerely will and bequeath my babyish giggle to Mary Julia Clark, and the remainder of my babyish actions to Jeanette Dagley, while my lady-like ways are to go to the Junior class at large. My ability as a dancer I bequeath to Annie of the kitchen, in order that she may waltz around and get lunch ready on time.

I, Agnes Porter, willingly bequeath all my English themes to Ellen Lamon, hoping they will enable her to have a more pleasant Senior year.

We, Glynn and Ruby Stark, do sorrowfully will and bequeath all our loving glances toward the boys to Marguerite Milburn and Louise Wilson.

I, Barnwell Fleming, do solemnly bequeath all my knowledge and argumentative qualities of Commercial Law to Roy McDonald, trusting he will become as great a lawyer as I.

I, Raymond Hudson, do will all my fame which I have won as a musician to Rapheal Livingston, trusting he will be able to fill my place in all school activities.

I, Hale Holland, feeling that it is impossible to do otherwise, with my heart full of sorrow and my eyes full of tears, will and bequeath my ten shares in the Ortmeier heart to Ellis Bathman.

I, Frieda Matill, will all my ability to win prizes at the Fair to Maurine Purser.

We, Martha Jones and Laura Grandin, will all of our affections for the whole tribe of Masseys to Freida Waldorf and Helen Lemons.

I, Nelle Parker, in a boisterous manner, will and bequeath all my quietude of mind to Fae Smith, hoping good results may come of this combination.

We, Stella Jones and Bessie Killian, in a happy and cheerful manner, will our flirtatious propensities to Merle Killian and Irene Peak.

We, the Senior Class, bequeath all our respect, love and thankfulness to the whole Faculty in remembrance of their struggles to educate us.

I, Jewell Robinson, after studying for many weary nights as to just what I could will, and realizing the fact that the will is all complete with the exception of mine, have requested that this be placed at the close of the will: I hereby bequeath all that I am (only a precious Jewell) to the one who thinks he deserves such a treasure.

In Witness Whereof, we have hereto subscribed our names and affixed our seal, the 16th day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and seventeen.

WITNESSES: { BEN KOBLANTZ,
KITTLE SCHOOLFIELD,
JOHN HALE.
